

PENALTY CAUSES OWLS TO TIE GAME WITH LANGHORNE

Referee Sees Backfield in Motion in Final Minute of Fourth Period

SCORE ENDS 7 TO 7

Game Was Full of Interest Throughout All Periods

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Nov. 12.—A penalty deprived coach George Reimer and his Bensalem Owls of a victory over the Langhorne Redskins in a Lower Bucks conference tilt played on the Owls field here yesterday afternoon. As a result the Owls and Redskins battled to a 7-7 deadlock and thereby called off the Armistice Day proceedings with the white flag waving from both benches with neither being crowned the winner.

The penalty came in the final minute of the fourth period, as a result of the Owls' backfield being detected in motion by referee Henny Morgan as they made a first down about an inch from the goal line.

The Owls recovered a Langhorne fumble on the Redskins 37 yard line. But Jack Scarborough was thrown back on the 45 when looking for a pass receiver. However, on the next play, the Owl captain faded back to Langhorne's 42 and heaved a long pass down the north side line. Harry Baker, left end for the Owls, made a sparkling catch as he took it on the dead run over his shoulders on the Langhorne 25 yard line and ran down to the ten before Chuck Klein threw him out of bounds.

Bob Scarborough hit the center of the line to place the ball on Langhorne's five yard stripe. Joe Cahill picked up another yard and Jack Scarborough was downed on the one yard marker. Just falling short of a first down—or to be more technical, a touchdown. So it was fourth down with about two feet to go for a first down and one yard for a touchdown.

Leo Riley took the ball and plunged down to approximately one inch from the goal line, but Bensalem's backs became a bit over anxious and started to charge before the ball was snapped.

Poultrymen To Gather Monday at Blooming Glen

Poultrymen from all sections of Bucks County will gather in Community Hall, at Blooming Glen, on November 14th, at eight p. m., to hear about the biggest farm meeting ever held in the United States—the World's Poultry Congress.

The event is scheduled for Cleveland, Ohio, July 28—August 7, when more than 60 nations will take part in a gigantic exposition that will rival the World's Fairs on the two coasts and will attract government dignitaries from the President down.

Raymond Taylor, well-known poultryman of Newtown, reports that two prominent speakers have been obtained to present the story of the World's Poultry Congress in detail. Jay Odell of the Seymour Packing Company will speak for the distributors and S. L. Althouse, managing editor of The Poultry Item, will represent the producers.

The World's Poultry Congress will attract poultrymen and consumers of poultry products from all over the country. It is estimated that at least a half million will attend the 10-day session. Eggs and poultry in the modern everyday health diet will be in the spotlight.

The amount of publicity and advertising that the World's Poultry Congress will receive will depend entirely on the number of advance memberships distributed before January 1. A $1.00 membership entitles the holder to a week's admission in Cleveland, but it is pointed out that thousands of people who cannot go to Cleveland will want to share in the support of the Congress, because of its great benefit to the Poultry Industry. Bucks county's quota is $1230.

The meeting at Blooming Glen is one of a series of five being held in the southeastern counties surrounding Philadelphia. This is the most important section of the state and county leaders are anxious to have their quotas go over the top.

There will be entertainment and refreshments after the speaking program.

Poultry is a 75 million dollar industry in Pennsylvania and usually ranks second in amount of annual gross income.

TO PLAY COMEDY ROLE

JOHN WARREN

JOHN WARREN TO AGAIN PLAY A COMEDY ROLE

Bristol High School Comedian Assigned Part In "Guess Again"

WELL SUITED TO ROLE

John Warren, that inimitable comedian of Bristol high school, will delight the audience once again this year as Waldo, a hotel-porter and would-be actor in the play, "Guess Again," to be presented in the high school auditorium on Thursday and Friday evenings.

It will be remembered how Warren fairly bowled over his audience with laughter last year as the bell-hop in the play, "The Mummy and the Mumps!" He was hailed as a "find" and had the whole town talking about his natural gift for acting. Later in the year he scored again in the annual one-act play contest and won honorable mention for his class through his interpretation of a love-sick adolescent in "Junior's Moustache."

John, a popular senior, is wholeheartedly interested in acting. He seems to be "a born actor." Miss Gladys Hewitt, who has coached the high school plays for a number of years, is quoted as saying: "I have never worked with anyone quite so enthusiastic as John. He always knows all his lines before the first rehearsal and goes upon the stage feeling perfectly at home."

The part of Waldo seems almost to have been made for him. His one ambition is acting—one time he's a Barrymore and the next time he's an elephant. He succeeds in keeping his boss, who doesn't appreciate acting, and the audience mixed up by changing from a Chinaman to a Frenchman, and even to a modest, shy chambermaid. Added to all this, Warren impersonates a titled Englishman. Can you imagine that?

This prominent senior, who is interested in many other activities besides dramatics, has a delightful sense of self-assurance, but is far from conceited.

GERMANS PUT INTO EFFECT FIRST ANTI-JEWISH LAWS

Measure Forbids Jews To Buy or Carry Weapons; Heavy Penalties Involved

A WARNING IS GIVEN

By Pierre J. Huss

BERLIN, Nov. 12.—(INS)—The first of the new German anti-Jewish laws—a measure forbidding Jews to buy or carry weapons—went into effect today, with offenders liable to fines or penitentiary sentences of as much as five years in serious cases.

The new measure was issued by Wilhelm Frick, Reich Minister of Interior, and gave legal force to an order previously issued by Heinrich Himmler, head of the Nazi secret police.

Further anti-Semitic laws are being prepared and may be promulgated later today.

Issuance of the new law followed a warning to foreign Jews by Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels in a statement to representatives of the foreign press. Goebbels informed Jews in the United States and elsewhere that their co-religionists in Germany would be even more severely treated if Jews abroad continue anti-Nazi activities.

Addressing an anti-Semitic mass meeting at Munich, Bavarian Nazi leader Adolf Wagner bitterly assailed both Jews and Catholics.

Wagner told the gathering: "During the arrests (of Jews) a Polish Jew in Munich perished. The accident happened because he criticized and could not keep his mouth shut."

Assailing Catholics, the Nazi district leader added that he believed no Sunday passed without incitement against Nazis. He charged that each word of criticism of the Nazi regime coming from a pulpit in the Reich "provides a challenge for Jews all over the world to act against Germany."

Goebbels, in his statement to correspondents, declared a "comprehensive solution" of the Jewish problem is imminent. He said:

"I urgently warn Jews abroad not to overplay their hands in anti-German agitation. Everything will depend on the good behavior of the Jews in the matter of how they are going to be treated. But above all it will depend on the good behavior of the Jews abroad."

Lashing at "ill-advised and unreal leadership" of "international Jewry," he added:

"It is a proven fact that anti-Semitism has increased continuously since 1933 everywhere in the world."

"I advise Jewish publications, especially in North America, to keep quiet. There is only one thing for the Jews to do. That is to keep quiet, to shut up, to say nothing further about Germany."

"I must make it clear that Germany is Nazi and anti-Semitic. I must reiterate that it would aid our national life if the parasites were removed. We would gladly turn over the German Jews to any state having an insufficient number of them."

"KEEP THE FIFTH MAN ALIVE!"

"Keep the fifth man alive!" The National Safety Council went to the drivers and pedestrians of the country with that appeal today in an effort to pull down the usually super-heavy November and December traffic toll.

The goal is to cut this toll 20 per cent and thus keep pace with an unbroken reduction in traffic deaths that prevailed the first three quarters of the year with a saving of 5,820 lives. This drastic drop has come in the face of the fact that automotive travel has increased slightly in the same period.

If the 20 per cent reduction can be maintained the rest of the year, the Council said, the 1938 traffic toll will be approximately 8,000 below last year's total of 39,500 and this year will go down as the most encouraging in the nation's history from the traffic safety viewpoint.

A uniform 20 per cent drop in fatalities means, the Council pointed out, that one out of every five persons

Republicans Plan Battle

Washington, Nov. 12.—(INS)—The Republicans, in their first big drive of the 76th Congress, will seek to enlist diffident Democrats and then force a comprehensive investigation of the Works Progress Administration and de-thronement of WPA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins.

Rep. Joseph W. Martin of Massachusetts, chairman of the Republican Campaign Committee and slated for the post of Republican House leader, will personally lead the battle.

Business Swings Upward

Washington, Nov. 12.—Business continued its forward march right through a usually pre-election period, and today was maintaining its upward surge, according to reports reaching the government from all parts of the country.

With the building industry still leading the return from depression, the entire economic front apparently had responded favorably to Republican gains in Tuesday's balloting.

Industrial output boomed, relief rolls declined and trade—both wholesale and retail—continued to improve. But construction activity still was far ahead of the field, that virtually assured the permanence of the recovery trend, if the axiom "as building goes so goes industry," is to be trusted.

BRISTOL CADETS WIN FIRST PRIZE AT TRENTON

Capture $150 in Parade Competition Held During Armistice Day Celebration

MADE A FINE SHOWING

The American Legion Cadets of Robert W. Bracken Post, No. 382, captured the first prize for junior corps in Trenton yesterday, when the Bristol group participated in an Armistice Day parade held in the New Jersey capital. The prize was a check for $150.

The Cadets competed with numerous other corps from Pennsylvania and New Jersey. The competition was rather unusual in the fact that the contestants had to be at top-notch throughout the entire parade. The judging was done by judges along the route of the parade and also before two judges' stands, located at different points.

The Bristol Cadets scored an average of 96.4, while their nearest rivals in all such competitions and also for Pennsylvania state honors, the Penn Treaty Corps, scored an average of 95.1. Other scores were Liberty Bell, V. F. W., 96; Holy Name, of Garfield, N. J., 95.7.

Senior corps in order of rank were: Houston Post, No. 3, Philadelphia; East Orange Post, No. 73; Doremus Post, No. 55, Hackensack; Public Service Post, No. 160, East Orange.

The Bristol Cadets were transported to Trenton in automobiles by the members of the Bracken Post. The Cadets reported back to the War Memorial Building and then went to the Armory where they staged an exhibition along with other competing corps. At the Armory the Bristol Cadets rendered concert music under the baton of Charles Brodie, their musical director.

All along the route of the parade the Bristol Cadets received loud applause.

ACTION MUST BACK THE WILL TO PEACE, SAYS DR. WESTBURGH

Philadelphian Shows Travel Club How Psychologist Looks at Peace

SEE RED CROSS FILMS

Hand-Work Made By Blind Also Sold Before Varied Program is Given

As long as Money is the God, Power is the Son, and Competition is the unholy spirit, this country will not have the proper educational basis that is necessary for peace, according to Dr. Edward M. Westburgh. This thought was advanced yesterday before a meeting of The Travel Club, when Dr. Westburgh, a member of the medical staff of the University of Pennsylvania, was the guest speaker.

The women were, through the enlightening discourse, shown how a psychologist looks at peace. They also learned that a sound educational basis and action must back the will to peace; and were informed that the system of competition as carried out today all over the world is basically wrong.

The program period was allotted by the club president, Mrs. Earl Tomb, to Mrs. William DuHamel, who introduced the speaker.

"We hear so much about the will to peace—well I think most of us have the will to peace. But what we need is sound thinking and intelligent co-operation that leads to peace," commented Dr. Westburgh. "The will to peace is not the thing that counts—it's the habit that determines if we lead effective lives for peace," and as an illustration he pointed out the difference between the individual who would like to send flowers to ill friends, and the person who actually carries out the deed. "That is a good habit which is backed up by the will to do kind acts. . . . We can't make a theoretical concept of peace effective—we must have something concrete and specific. Of course peace meetings have an educational value, but they alone won't prevent war."

The fact that there is a war in a foreign country does not necessarily mean the United States must take its boats in that section to be sunk, was another pertinent thought of the Philadelphian. "If there are rabid dogs fighting in another part of your town, you would not holdly walk through those streets, claiming that you as a free citizen had a right to walk where you pleased, would you?"

The thought was expressed that America is an adolescent nation. "And an adolescent nation is an idealistic nation."

Dr. Westburgh was also of the opinion that teaching adults and children not to fight won't bring about peace. "The psychology is not sound—in fact it is natural for a child to fight if someone gets fresh with him. That is human nature when you are young."

Andrew Brown Dies Of Injuries Received in Crash

A second amputation of a portion of the leg failed to save the life of Andrew Brown, Street Road, Eddington, following a motor accident five days previous, and he died at nine o'clock last evening in Harrison Hospital.

Brown sustained an injury to the right foot when a horse-drawn vehicle loaded with Bensalem Township high school students, and an automobile, collided on Bristol Pike at Cornwells Heights, last Saturday evening.

The injured man was hurried to Harrison Hospital, where his foot was amputated at the ankle. On Wednesday re-amputation was found necessary, gangrene having developed, and the limb was severed at the knee.

In the accident in which Brown sustained his fatal injuries, four others were hurt slightly.

George F. Fitch, Eddington, driver of the automobile involved, suffered lacerated nose and bruised chest; and the Misses Marian Mills, Maple Shade, and Edith Stuhlraeger, Cornwells Heights; and Leo J. Riley, Crofton, were also injured. The latter three were members of a party of students who had been on a straw-ride, with Brown driving the vehicle. The pleasure-jant was almost concluded, the party being near the school building, when the accident took place.

Fitch was arrested on charges of reckless driving, and assault and battery by automobile, the arrest being made by private Carfagno, of Oxford Valley barracks of Pennsylvania Motor Police. He was held in $500 bail for hearing.

Dr. James P. Lawler, deputy coroner of Bucks County, was called, and issued a certificate stating that death was due to traumatic diabetic shock following amputation.

THE ELECTION

As the full significance of Tuesday's election becomes apparent, the extent of the disaster that overtook Roosevelt amazes even those who were fully cognizant of the manner in which Roosevelt was re-elected in 1936 by the use of Federal funds.

Federal funds were lavished upon the electorate this year also, but the magic did not work, although every means was employed to coerce those on the WPA and all other Federal projects, schemes, devices and tricky setups whose sole objective was to carry the election for Crackpotism.

There is only one explanation of the result: After six years of Roosevelt failure, the croon has lost its magic and from now on the Nation will resume its climb toward Constitutional government and economic sanity.

The defeat of Earle in Pennsylvania, Murphy in Michigan, LaFollette in Wisconsin and Benson in Minnesota—Roosevelt stooges all—is more than significant. These birds had funds and patronage without parallel in history, but the voters thought it time to call a halt to the political carnival these specimens were staging for their own amusement.

Pennsylvania will find it hard to get back the industries which were driven from the State by Earle and his punitive taxation orgy. Michigan will long suffer as a result of the sit-down strikes condoned by Murphy, who was in telephone communication with the White House almost hourly when the reprisals against the motor industry for supporting Landon in 1936 were staged. The automobile industry was booming two years ago. It has had a bad year in 1938.

Wisconsin will find the road back from LaFolletteism a long one, but it has made a great start in toppling "Brother Phil." The less said about Benson, of Minnesota, who was defeated handsily by his 31-year-old Republican opponent, the better. It is enough to know that Roosevelt thought so much of him that he made a last-minute radio appeal for votes for him.

Now that the day has been speeded when the Hopkins, the Cohens and Corcorans, the Lyses, the Farleys and the Perkinses will take their departure from Washington, every patriotic American has one duty to himself and to his country: To work unceasingly to the end that the whole New Deal mess be obliterated from the District of Columbia and all the States as rapidly as possible.

WHERE'S THE MONEY GOING?

Here's an interesting and illuminating fact just brought to light by the National Association of Cost Accountants:

One-third of the total amount of American industrial income last year went to the tax collectors. This constitutes 185 per cent of aggregate payrolls.

No wonder business is having a hard time getting back on its feet.

When the costs of government absorb a third of the entire return from productive enterprise, the average employer can scarcely be blamed for wondering whether business initiative is worth the effort it takes.

The Roosevelt-John L. Lewis kiss of death worked like a hurricane in this election, toppling 11 Governors from their soft perches and putting 90 $10,000-a-year Congressmen back on the open market, where they are worth currently about $10 a week.

FISHERMAN PULLS IN DUCK

DIABLO DAM, Rockport, Wash.—(INS)—Cast your fly upon the waters—and maybe you will catch a duck! That is what Leo Cook, construction worker on the Ruby dam, did while fishing in the Skagit river. Cook flipped his line in the air for a cast. Suddenly it grew taut. He reeled in his catch and found it was a duck he had snared in full flight. The duck was released in a game sanctuary.

that the period of unbroken reductions began in November, 1937.

The Council is taking its nationwide campaign straight to police chiefs, motor vehicle administrators, and other public officials, to community safety council officials and safety contact men in thousands of cities.

"This year, for the first time," said D. D. Fennell, president of the National Safety Council, "we have a fair chance of effecting really substantial reductions in traffic fatalities. Everything depends on this final two-month period—the period when normally we pile up huge death totals.

"Sleet, ice, snow and fog soon will make roads and highways doubly dangerous. Darkness comes earlier. There is the Christmas rush, with its hurry and bustle and spirit of conviviality, and the natural tendency by police and traffic officers to be lenient because of the geniality of the times.

"This year, more than ever before we must clamp down on careless drivers and pedestrians. A substantial drop in traffic deaths this year not only would be a fine achievement in itself, but would be a powerful stimulus to greater gains next year and in the years to come.

"Too many of us have felt that a steady increase in the traffic toll was inevitable. We now are proving that it isn't."

"Often a Bridesmaid"

BY HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER XXVII

They talked and talked, unmindful of the time.

Mr. Wickham did most of the talking. He talked about Cousin Jed. Of their childhood together. Of the years that they spent in India. Of London seasons. Of Violet, Jed's wife, who died. And of Jed's only daughter, married, and living in Manila.

"Great travelers, we Wickhams," he said proudly. "Travel to the ends of the earth. If Jed didn't count on me taking over the estate for him, I'd like to make the trip with him. Of course, he's a little younger than I, but not much. A change of air, and I'd be quite myself again—ready for anything."

"To see one's old friends again!" Aunt Bet broke in excitedly. "After all these years! I can't believe it—I can't believe it!"

Babs and Margaret grinned companionably at each other across the table. Poor darlings! How they wanted to go!

But to finance the thing. Of course neither one of them had the least idea how much such a trip would cost. Aunt Bet had a little money, of course, and Daddy had something, but not much.

"How much would it cost to fix up the house so that it would rent?" Babs asked practically.

"Not so much. A couple of hundred ought to do it," Margaret knitted her brows. "I wish I knew if I'd get a raise. Mr. Elson acted as though I would. But he didn't actually say so. If I don't, I really don't see—"

"What don't you see?" "Yes, what's worrying you, dear?" Aunt Bet asked, turning from her brother and their bright plans, to smile upon her favorite niece.

"Why—different things. I'm the practical one, you know. There's Babs to get through college."

"You've been saying that for five years," Babs said, with irritation.

"If you've been five years getting through college, don't blame me!"

"All right. But the whole thing was your idea. I wanted to quit when Natalie did, and you know it."

"You ought to be glad you had the opportunity—"

"Oh, bother. I don't want any opportunity. If you'd just tend to your own business, Maggie, and let the rest of us tend to ours—"

"Oh," Margaret said. "If that's the way you feel."

"Please, Maggie. I didn't mean it just the way it sounded. I only meant—"

"All right—what did you mean?" "Oh, Maggie! You get so badly upset if anyone has an idea but yourself!"

"I don't. Except that no one but myself seems to have a practical idea. We want Daddy and Aunt Bet to have their trip—"

"If I go back, it won't be a trip. It'll be to stay. That is, if you can manage without me," Aunt Bet said.

"Of course we can manage! But one way or two, it still costs money. And if we rent the house, and I go south, then Babs will have to stay in the sorority house until she graduates—"

"I will not!"

"It's the logical place for you to stay. I can't go away and leave you on your own!"

"I'm twenty-one!"

"Yes—I know. But twenty-one or ten, you're still obliged to live, until you finish college, and you know you'll have to go another year to be able to teach—"

"But, Margaret—"

"Now, let ME talk—"

"If you'd just listen to ME—"

It was Babs who made herself heard above the others. She said, "Margaret, you're a wonderful gal and you've done too much for all of us. But listen! I don't want you to do anything more for me. I really don't. I don't want to stay on another year to get a teacher's certificate I'll never use, either. I've tried to tell you a million times, but you'll never listen. I want to marry Clicky—"

"Marry Clicky?"

"He's twenty-four and he's earning just twice what Kenneth Raleigh was earning when he married Susan—"

"And how well that turned out!" "Yes, but Clicky has sense. More sense as much—even if his earning power is only twice Ken's at the present moment. And I'm no Susan Decker, either, thank you! Furthermore, I've got a chance to get our apartment free. Joe Atwell's father is building a perfectly BEAUTIFUL bungalow court, and Joe said—"

"So you talked about it to Joe?" "Well, I had to talk about something. You were out, and I was just doing my best to entertain him."

"Talking about your ambitions to marry Clicky. You must have been entertaining!"

"Margaret—you forget yourself," Mr. Wickham said.

"I'm sorry." Tears blinded her. "I don't know what's the matter with me. Please forgive me, Babs. I'm—upset—"

"You're tired, Maggie—I'm a hound. I'm the one to be forgiven."

"No—No—it's I—"

Choking back the sobs, Margaret rushed from the room . . . upstairs, to lock herself in her room, and throw herself on the bed, to weep her heart out.

Oh, she knew what was wrong with her, all right. And they knew—everybody knew—nobody could help but know. She was just angry and hurt and mean and jealous—because Daddy and Aunt Bet acted as if they didn't need her any more. Because they wanted to get away. Because Babs wanted to get away . . . Because all her years, all her work, all her sacrifice was a joke—a joke on her.

And because—because Babs was going to be married—and she, the oldest—was going to be an old maid.

It was the last day of October, and almost the last hour. Tomorrow would be the first of November and Barbara's wedding day.

But there would be no wedding. At four o'clock in the morning Clicky would call for Babs, and they'd start out for Reno—to be married there, late in the afternoon.

Why they must drive all those miles to Reno, when they could just as well be married right at home, was something that neither Daddy nor Aunt Bet could fathom.

"But dear—it isn't as though you were a divorcee," Aunt Bet had protested.

And daddy had asked anxiously, "Clicky hasn't been married before, has he? There's no reason for this?"

Babs had just laughed. "No reason except that it will save a lot of trouble, and it's fun."

Fun! Margaret, lying fully dressed on the sofa, trying to get a little sleep before it was time to call Babs and prepare 3.30 coffee and orange juice, wondered just what was fun about getting up at 3 o'clock in the morning and arriving at the Reno city hall, tired, dirty and sleepy, in the middle of the afternoon.

Not that she'd said a word. Daddy and Aunt Bet had had their say, but she'd kept discreetly silent. She'd done her last advising, her last managing of someone else's affairs. She'd learned her lesson.

Her mouth twisted ruefully as she thought of it. Her years of running things. Thinking she was indispensable. Forcing Babs to finish her college course—"for her own good"—thinking that daddy and Aunt Bet needed her to keep up the house. And all they wanted was to have her and Babs off their hands, so that they could go back home to England.

No, that wasn't fair of her. They hadn't thought of it that way, but it was what was back of their minds.

Well, you learn—you learn a lot. I wonder if they'll be happy, when they go back, she mused. She thought of the nearly 30 years that her father and his sister had lived in California. All their friends, all their contacts, were here. Why did they want to go back to a place that would be strange and perhaps hostile and disappointing?

Maybe it was to renew their youth, to see again the places they'd known when they were young. Maybe you never wanted to acknowledge you were old. Maybe you were always trying, even when you were 60 or 65, to turn time back. Maybe you still thought of yourself as an individual—as Alex

Wickham, or Elizabeth Wickham Werfel—instead of as just a father, or an aunt. Maybe daddy and Aunt Bet really wanted to live their own lives as much as she wanted to live hers.

Well, they were getting their chance. Daddy would be on his way to Taos tomorrow night and Aunt Bet would follow soon. They'd have their chance—and she'd have hers.

A trip to New York. A taste of the life she'd dreamed of. And then the excitement and responsibility of managing an exclusive shop in a beautiful new hotel.

Pleasant pictures floated across her mind—herself on the streamlined train, in a swank New York hotel, visiting theaters, night clubs.

Her eyes closed. She slept.

The alarm clock, ringing steadily, determinedly, brought her back to consciousness with a jerk. Swiftly she stopped it, then lay back on the pillow for a brief, relaxed moment before she rose and washed and combed her hair.

It was a shame to wake Babs. She was so sound asleep, so very young and defenseless, with her thick, fair lashes shadowing her cheek and her pale yellow hair spread out on the pillow.

"Babs, it's a little after 3."

Babs opened unwilling eyes. "Just telephone Clicky, will you, and tell him I've changed my mind about marrying him?"

"Telephone him yourself!"

Babs sat up, groaning and yawning. "Heck, if I have to get up and telephone him I may as well go on to Reno and get married. It's darn mean of you, Maggie. You used to be much more obliging."

Margaret smiled. "All right. But I consider that a compliment. Anyway, you can use your own judgment about getting up. I've called you!"

Babs swung her feet out of bed and felt for the mules besides it. "Oh, dear—if I must, I must. How do I look?"

"Very sleepy."

"No—I mean—do I look all right? It would be just my luck to look blotchy, or ugly, or something."

She hurried, heels flapping, bathrobe trailing, over to the mirror to study her round little face anxiously.

Margaret couldn't help laughing. "Oh, Babs, you're funny!"

Babs laughed, too. "I had nightmares all night, thinking I'd break out with poison ivy, or the hives, or a cold in the head, or something. Oh, you don't know, Maggie. You always look like a million dollars, and you simply don't know what it is to worry."

Margaret saw herself in the glass, behind her sister. Saw her hair, pure gold and bright as metal, draining Babs' tow-head of all color. She saw her own perfect features and Babs' little pug nose and wide mouth.

"But you're younger and fresher," she said quickly. "And anyway—my looks haven't done much for me."

"It's your own fault if they haven't. Oh, Maggie—you ARE so pretty. Even at 3 o'clock in the morning. You ought to—to have millions—and servants and luxury. You really should. Listen, do you mind if I take your bath salts—these new swell package you haven't opened? I have mine packed, you know, and I don't care much for that other kind you have—rose, or whatever it is—"

"Of course. Take anything you want. Babs, you don't think I'm getting to look old—and old maidish—do you?"

A protesting shriek from the bathroom, where Babs was running hot water into the tub. "NO—what an idea—"

"Because, I don't know—I sometimes think—"

"You don't happen to have soap to match this stuff, do you, Maggie?"

"No—but there's the toilet water that Sue gave me at the same time, I'll get it."

Clouds of scented steam rose from the tub from which Babs' yellow head emerged. Babs was singing. One of the rowdy songs that she and Clicky did in falsetto.

"If there's anything else you want, Babs—"

Babs didn't even hear. She went on singing.

ON THE SCREENS

GRAND

"Freshman Year," featuring Dixie Dunbar, William Lundigan, Constance Moore and Ernest Truex, opens today at the Grand Theatre.

A realistic comedy drama of college life with music, it is the first of a new series by Universal.

As the title indicates, the picture deals with the exploits of a group of freshmen experiencing their first year of college life. In setting, action and dialogue it has all of the gaiety, sparkle and modernity, as well as the worries and pressing problems, of present-day college youth.

While emphasis is placed on comedy and music, this is never done at the expense of authenticity. The film confines itself strictly to life on the campus and in the classroom. Its accent on youth is always correct.

The lighter side of the quest for a higher education is presented with delightful wit. There is also the pathos of aspiring youth, which will make any sacrifice to attain its dreams of college life.

"Boys Town," starring Spencer Tracy and Mickey Rooney, brings the most colorful, human and exciting of real-life stories to the screen, proof again that "truth is stranger than fiction." The picture opens Sunday for a three days' engagement at the Grand Theatre.

More than a year ago, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer became interested in Boys Town, the only incorporated village of its kind in the world. This city of little men has a population of 275, of which 200 are boys, and is situated on the main highway west of Omaha, Nebraska. It is 21 years old, a dream come true, the dream of one of the greatest and most kindly humanitarians of our time, Father Edward J. Flanagan.

To Boys Town come boys, a never-ending parade of boys, who are made welcome irrespective of race or creed. Each of them has a problem, each of them a drama. Some were abandoned by their parents, others were neglected and many had criminal records. One boy was a bank robber at the age of 15; but of the 4300 boys who have passed through Boys Town none has become involved with the police since graduation, while 95 per cent are now normal, respectable and responsible young men and citizens of the communities in which they have settled.

"break-proof" Alcatraz Prison comes to the screen of the Bristol Theatre today, when Paramount's action-packed "King of Alcatraz" opens there, with a cast headed by Gail Patrick, Lloyd Nolan and J. Carrol Naish.

"King of Alcatraz" is more than another "gang" picture. It's a timely, thrill-packed adventure-romance, which builds up from its smashing opening in which the escaping criminal, J. Carrol Naish, and his henchmen board a small steamer in disguise, overpower the crew and plan to pirate the ship.

The story moves in swift, gripping scenes to the recapture of the ship by the loyal crew. But in the retaking of the ship, Nolan, the loyal radio operator, is wounded, Miss Patrick, the ship's nurse, forced to operate, is put in two-way radio communication with a doctor aboard another ship some hundreds of miles away. Following his instructions in one of the most unforgettable scenes ever to reach the screen, she saves Nolan's life.

A quartette of happy-go-lucky youngsters — luscious Betty Grable, gorgeous Eleanor Whitney, handsome William Henry and famed Hank Luisetti, Stanford University basketball star, rated the greatest player the game has ever known, will be seen in action in Paramount's new college romance, "Campus Confessions," which opens next Sunday at the Bristol Theatre.

"Campus Confessions," the first motion picture to introduce basketball to the screen, is the fast-moving tale of a youngster anxious to be liked by his fellow students at college, but who is terribly handicapped by his unfortunate possession of too much money, which instinctively makes them draw back.

The young millionaire, played by William Henry, desperate because of his lack of success in making friends, finally hits on the idea of showing that he is a good sport on the sports field. He goes out for the basketball squad, makes it, and under the tutelage of Hank Luisetti, develops into a star.

The romance angles of the film, in the capable hands of Betty Grable and Eleanor Whitney, are believable and pleasing and the sports scenes on the basketball field are thrilling and novel. The "big game" shown in the film is a re-enactment of the famous Stanford-U. S. C. game of 1937, rated by experts as the most thrilling and most perfect exhibition of basketball on record.

"Campus Confessions" was directed by George Archibald.

"RECS" TO MEET EAGLES IN GAME HERE TOMORROW

Tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 on Leedom's field the Bristol Recs will play host to the Trenton Eagles, the most powerful football team in north Jersey.

To date the Eagles have defeated Florence, who played a scoreless tie with the Recs; Lambertville, Princeton, Roehling, Flemington, Hammon, Atlantic City, and last Sunday Trenton team. In this game the Eagles outplayed their opponents but lacked the scoring punch.

The Eagles again this year have a line averaging close to 200 pounds and a big, fast set of backs led by Clymer, triple threat back from Trenton High. The Recs have been working strenuously all week for this game, so as to avenge a bitter setback received at the Eagles' hands last year, 7-6. The Recs in this game led from the first quarter up until the last few seconds of play, when Clymer smashed over for a score as the whistle blew ending the game, then in the extended time booted the extra point from placement.

Not playing last Sunday, due to inclement weather, the injuries of some of the players have responded to treatment and for the first time since the opening game the Recs will have a full squad. Coach Gige Dougherty is uncertain as to who will start, but it is probable that Zeffries, Swadis, McLaughlin and Kervick, who gave such a splendid performance last time out, will start in the backfield.

Through the courtesy of the Bristol Theatre, a play by play broadcast of the game will be made. The kick-off is at 2:30 sharp. Come out and root for the Bristol boys.

Penalty Causes Owls To Tie Game With Langhorne

When given the choice of play or penalty, Klein took the penalty. This placed the ball back on the Redskins' 6 yard line with fourth down.

Captain and quarterback, Jack Scarborough, called for a placekick in an attempted field goal. However, he crossed up the Redskins and threw a pass instead. But the passer was rushed and throwing the ball in a hurry, Jack threw it far over the head of the intended receiver, Bob Scarborough. The ball went out of the end zone and so Langhorne took it on their own six yard line.

The Redskins then marched down to Bensalem's 31, making one first down as the game ended.

Bensalem scored first in the opening period on a sensational forty yard run by Bob Scarborough. Klein had kicked from his own 20 to midfield where Jack Scarborough returned it to 40. Then Bob took a reverse from brother Jack, and ran down the left side line 40 yards to score. Joe Cahill place-kicked the extra point to make it, 7-0. And that was the score at the end of the initial half.

It was about mid-way in the third chapter that the Redskins pushed the ball into the end zone to score. Tom Carney recovered a Bensalem fumble on the Owls' 34 marker. Klein plunged down to the 30, then after the next play failed to gain, Klein tossed a pass to Carney good for four more yards. The latter then picked up four yards to make a first down on the 22.

In looking for a pass receiver, Klein was dropped back on the 30 for a 14 yard loss after Carney took the ball to the 16. But then Dale Miller heaved an aerial that Chuck Klein snared on the 10 yard line on a beautiful catch and was thrown out of bounds on the 4 yard line. Carney lugged the ball to the one foot line then Klein hit the center of the Owls line to go over. Dale Miller passed to Tom Carney for the extra point that tied the score at 7-7.

The Owls' last minute scoring bid was the only other serious threat during the rest of the game. Bensalem made 6 first downs to 3 for the Redskins, gained 157 yards from scrimmage to 77 for Langhorne, and completed two passes for 55 yards while the Redskins completed a like number for 16 yards.

FALLSINGTON GAME WITH NEWTOWN, 6-6

NEWTOWN, Nov. 12.—Fallsington High scored its second touchdown of the season at the expense of the Newtown Indians but that represented enough for the Falcons to hold the highly favored Indians to a 6-6 tie in a Lower Bucks conference tilt played here yesterday afternoon.

The Falcons, in holding the much stronger Newtown club to a tie, presented a formidable front line of defense and played a great brand of ball to gain a moral victory in upsetting the dope by failing the draw.

YARDLEY ELEVEN TO PLAY AT ANDALUSIA

Another record-breaking crowd is expected at Andalusia tomorrow afternoon when Joe Diamanti's Andalusia A. A. eleven clashes with Mike Derrick's Yardley aggregation.

The crowd is expected to surpass the total of 2000 which saw the Green Wave hold the St. Ann's A. A. team to a scoreless deadlock last week. There is a possibility that the "Saints" and triple A may meet again before the gridiron season draws to a close. The Yardley eleven is a potential opponent for the Andalusians, not having been beaten or scored upon this season. Derrick has his players picked from Trenton, Yardley, Fallsington and Morrisville.

Their records show that they have

Behind the Scenes in HOLLYWOOD

By HARRISON CARROLL

Copyright, 1938
King Features Syndicate, Inc.

HOLLYWOOD.—During the Gary Coopers' absence in Europe, theirs will be the most heavily guarded film home since Marlene Dietrich barred windows and hired watchmen to protect her daughter, Maria, against kidnapers. The Coopers have left their baby at home in the care of trusted servants. As a double protection, they have installed three guards, working on eight-hour shifts.

The guards are armed not only with pistols, but rifles.

The preview of "The Great Waltz" was Miliza Korjus' night of triumph, but the singing star wasn't even able to find a seat. Two of the best were reserved for her, but she slipped by the publicity boys at the entrance and wasn't recognized by the ushers. They sent her up to the balcony but all the seats up there were taken, too. So Miliza had to watch the picture sitting on the stairs in an aisle.

Don't be surprised if Sonja Henie acquires a skating partner for her next picture. The star's tango number, done with Stewart Reburn, is the hit of her new ice revue which opened here at a $5.50 premiere preparatory to a tour around the country. Show has gorgeous costumes and Sonja is queen of the rinks, but the revue could use more comedy.

Hollywood celebs, many of whom came in evening clothes, almost froze to death. Overcoatless David Niven was asked to sign an autograph. "Only if you'll let me use your coat as a rug," he quipped to the fan. Niven was with Joan Bennett. Tyrone Power, linked romantically with Sonja, came in a party with his mother. Ironic sight: the concession man who kept trying to sell 25-cent autographed pictures of Sonja to the movie stars in the boxes.

Most of the Hollywood gang went from the Polar Palace to La Conga, where, at one time, Basil Rathbone and Ouida Bergere, Claudette Colbert and Dr. Pressman, and Myrna Loy and Arthur Hornblow were on the dance floor executing the newest rumba steps. Lady Ashley and Douglas Fairbanks did the rumba, too, but with less abandon. And you haven't played six games and won five of them. They were held to a scoreless deadlock by Fleming last week. The Andalusia team has won seven games and has been deadlocked once. Only one team has scored on them so this tilt with the Bruins should be a natural.

Next week, the boys of Joe Diamanti will play the South Langhorne Aces on Michel's field. This will mark the third lower Bucks County team that the Andalusians will face in consecutive order.

Tilt for tomorrow is scheduled for 2:30 o'clock.

Action Must Back Will To Peace, Says Dr. Westburgh

During that stage of life it's a normal, healthy development. The trouble is if you fight physically as an adult, then you are not grown up emotionally, and because people are not grown up emotionally we have wars.

"What we do want people to do, however, is to fight against the things that are wrong and injurious." He then spoke of the slums in cities, where thousands live in squalor. "But there are many times that many people who are in far better circumstances in the city, who if they were willing to fight that thing could eliminate those slums. The trouble is we don't fight enough for some things; we don't have sufficient feeling of hate against wrongs that we witness."

Turning attention to industrial battles the speaker said that in his opinion, "Picketing is alright if it is done peaceably, but if it is not peaceable the pickets are not grown up emotionally." The view was expressed that education is at fault, in all these circumstances. "We must develop new ideas and new ideals if we want to eliminate strife and wars of all kinds. It is the way we look at affairs that determines the way we go."

That many are uneducated in spite of instruction in institutions of higher learning was another thing voiced. "You can go through college if you have a good memory, and still not be worth more than $15 a week for the rest of your life. So we find that it is not only the illiterate that have the wrong attitude toward vital things of life."

Dr. Westburgh expressed the desire for elimination of money as the god of the people. "We should give reward and recognition to those who achieve where money is not involved. The system of competition is all wrong for individual accomplishment. We should recognize more those who do the most, not for themselves, but for the group, the club, the community as a whole. The games where one person usually wins are bad games. It gives people the wrong slant on life. It leads to a psychological state that is unhealthy, a state where war is very possible. We should teach our children to compete with self, striving to do each day better than he did the day previous. That method of looking at things has a good psychological outcome. That is healthy, normal competition."

The need of teaching the youth of the land the truth about leaders and generals was mentioned. "We should not hold our generals up to the girls and boys as being perfect. We know that is untrue. Tell them of the truth, but let them know that in spite of faults those generals were willing to give up all for the sake of their country."

Sound moving pictures were shown by a Red Cross representative. Mrs. DuHamel, local chairman of the Red Cross, told that "Life is made up of sunshine and shadow, and it is necessary to have the shadow to appreciate the sunshine." She then told of first aid stations being established by the Red Cross at many service stations, with attendants being trained in first aid, and at which stations doctors of the community are listed. This is proving a great aid to motorists injured along the highways.

A representative of the Philadelphia Branch of the Pennsylvania Association for the Blind, displayed articles made by the blind, and sold such to club members.
